AUGUST 2025

18th August. Vietnam Veterans Day

Vietnam Veterans' Day is commemorated on 18 August every year. The day was originally known as Long Tan Day, chosen to commemorate the men of D Company, 6RAR who fought in the battle of Long Tan in 1966. On that day, 108 Australian and New Zealand soldiers fought a pitched battle against over 2,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops in a rubber plantation not far from the small village of Long Tan. The Australians prevailed, but only after fighting in torrential rain for four hours.

They were nearly overrun, but were saved by a timely ammunition resupply, accurate artillery fire from the nearby Australian base, and the arrival of reinforcements by armoured personnel carrier. Eighteen Australians lost their lives and 24 were wounded, the largest number of casualties in one operation since the Australian task force had arrived a few months earlier.

After the battle the bodies of 245 enemy soldiers were found, but there was evidence that many more bodies had been carried away.

On the third anniversary of Long Tan, 18 August 1969, a cross was raised on the site of the battle by the men of 6RAR. Veterans from the battle gathered at the cross to commemorate the fallen, and the day was commemorated by them as Long Tan Day from then on. Over time, all Vietnam veterans adopted the day as one to commemorate those who served and died in Vietnam. In 1987, following the very successful Welcome Home parade for Vietnam veterans in Sydney, Prime Minister Bob Hawke announced that Long Tan Day would be known as Vietnam Veterans' Day. Since then, it has been commemorated every year as the day on which the service of all those men and women who served in Vietnam is remembered.

The 2025 Annual General Meeting has been conducted, again at the wonderful Avoca Hotel, and a loyal 42 members and partners attended to cast their votes and enjoy some traditional military-style camaraderie. The Minutes and Reports can be found on our website at www.rsara.asn.au/notice-board/ within 7 days. All the pics are on Page 3,4,5 & 6.

Our Fund Raiser Raffle for 2 nights accommodation in the Welcome Swallow Boat House at White Sands was drawn by Brigadier Graham Goodwin, and the lucky winners are:

1st Prize goes to
Grieg Swalue

2nd Prize goes to
Charles Wilkinson

3rd Prize goes to
Angela Portakiewicz

Congratulations to all our winners, who have been notified by phone, and a big thank you to everyone who purchased tickets to support our soldiers.

I've put a few words together on Page 7 & 8 basically to thank those who help keep this worthwhile association running. A lot of the everyday work is carried out by the committee who continually step up to the plate to ensure all tasks are completed, and the members are kept abreast of everything operational. Thanks again to our members who continue to pay their subs to keep us afloat.

As with all manufactured goods, due to increasing costs from our suppliers, the price of certain items will rise from time to time. We are now forced to increase the costs charged for some clothing items, albeit very small. We make very little profit from our merchandise, so please bear with us. From time to time (ANZAC Day, Remembrance Day etc) we will have a sale on certain items, and we encourage you to watch out for those offers.

On the subject of Merchandise, our Merchandise and Marketing Officer CPL Selina Laing recently had a short stint in hospital to replace some worn out body parts and is currently in rehab, getting ready to return to work. I'm sure you'll all wish her a speedy recovery. For all Merchandise sales, Selina says it's business as usual.

That's it for this month. Stay well and stay safe.

Presidents 2025 AGM Report

David Laing

I start this report with a word of thanks to those who have faith in me to carry on the task as President of this wonderful Association. I am humbled to receive your votes and will ensure I let no one down. This time last year we sat and listened to Rod Beames present his Annual Report, and no one would have thought that within a month he would pass away. He fought the brave battle for 5 years and left a legacy that I shall strive to continue. The Rodney Beames Perpetual Shield, presented each year to an "outstanding soldier" of the Battalion will also ensure his memory lives on.

Our 10/27 Bn soldiers continue to put up their hands for dangerous deployments, and this year we have seen 21 of our soldiers deployed on TSE 116 Border Protection duties in January, some for up to 6 months. The Committee had much pleasure in preparing and sending Care Packages to them, just to show that we care for their service and their sacrifices. We shall continue to provide this service as long as there is an RSAR Association. I have taken a phone call from one of the Team Leaders on the deployment, WO2 Tyrone Barnacle-Watts, who thanked me warmly on behalf of his soldiers for the Care Packages which were very enthusiastically received.

At the start of the year we welcomed a new Commanding Officer LTCOL Darrin Tyson and a new Regimental Sergeant Major WO1 Mark Broadbent, and I'm happy to say they have both responded very well to our training. (I jest, of course!)

They are both seasoned warriors with very impressive CVs and they have hit the ground running with their support of the Association. We continue to have a great working relationship. Thank you for your service and your support gentlemen.

The Battalion has taken on a more exciting role and will step up to take a more active part in our defence, becoming extremely proactive within the homeland security field. There are exciting times ahead.

We are also blessed by welcoming a new Adjutant in Captain Charles Jilbert, who was instrumental in getting us through the gates of RAAF Base Edinburgh in February to feed the troops. The CO, Adjutant and RSM are all now Honorary Members of the Association for the length of their tenures.

We continue to support the Battalion every year by way of awards and shields for high achievers, HQ honour board updates, catering provision, support for the wonderful 10/27 Battalion Band, Care Packages and of course the camaraderie of the serving and former serving members and their partners.

Our AGM and End of Year Lunch are the highlights of our year and I'm pleased to see both becoming more popular.

We have one problem within our Association! We can't attract a big enough group of volunteers to support our Battalion support exercises.

There are only TWO catering exercises per year. The Force Preservation Exercise at RAAF Base Edinburgh in February, and the Simpson Trophy Competition held later each year at Murray Bridge. We need between 10 and 12 volunteers, for what is usually a 4 hour stint of preparation, serving and clean up. Not a really hard task if the work is spread around. At the Force Prep in February we struggled to get 8 volunteers, but we managed to pull it off with great results. The volunteers were fantastic, led by old faithful Col Abel, but they are always the same people who put up their hands. These exercises aren't reserved for retired Privates, Corporals and retired Warrant Officers. I'm certain the soldiers would be very impressed to see a couple of retired Lieutenant Colonels or Majors cooking a BBQ for them. It's not hard. It's not impossible, but it's up to you. If we can't provide this simple means of manual support, we may as well hang up our gloves and fade off into the sunset. It's up to you!

Our membership numbers are now at 231 and growing steadily, making us one of the most progressive services groups in the country. We always need more members, so if you know of a comrade who would benefit from joining us, please steer them in the right direction.

The Battalion produced a very informative and professional "Pro Patria 2024" journal late last year, but due to the large cost, future "Pro Patria" journals will be distributed electronically. (Just like this newsletter!)

This year we have instigated an Exchange Program with our allied battalion "over the ditch", the 2nd/4th Battalion, Royal New Zealand Infantry Regiment, which will see some OF our soldiers travel to NZ for 2 weeks training, and a similar number of Kiwi soldiers come to Adelaide for the same purpose. This is a good time to foster and build on the strength of the ANZAC tradition, and I can think of no better way to do it.

Presidents 2025 AGM Report

David Laing

We had a very successful ANZAC Day, with 38 members marching the long road to the Cross of Sacrifice. We send our thanks to the two Banner Bearers PTE Reddin and PTE Dadd, and the 8 serving members from the Battalion who marched with us on the day.

Our Fundraiser Raffle has raised an estimated $2,000, which will help boost our coffers in the future, and I thank all those who purchased tickets, and those who took books of tickets to sell. The support we provide to the Battalion isn't cheap, so having a fund raiser such as this helps us achieve our goals.

The lucky winner was drawn at the conclusion of the AGM, and the winners are on Page 2.

I would like to thank my Vice President Des Hawkins for taking up some of the load, and the rest of our very supportive committee for spreading themselves out and "having my back!" Thanks to:

padre's Ponderings

By Padre Stephen Albrecht—Chaplain 10/27 Battalion RSAR

As I am currently on course, I was reminded that training is not a formality — it's a foundation that is built on. Whether you're a recruit or an experienced NCO guiding others, the expectation remains the same: it's important to be on top of your game.

Did you know the way we train determines how we fight, how we lead, and how we support one another in times that truly matter.

We train with purpose, as we prepare for operational readiness, domestic tasking, and joint force cooperation. Being on top of your game means you're mentally and physically switched on, ready to respond when called upon.

If you treat training like a box to tick, you won't have the edge when it counts.

Every soldier contributes to the culture of the Battalion. Showing up late, cutting corners, or drifting through drills affects the team, just as much as precision, discipline, and sharpness does. When you're on top of your game, you raise the bar. Others will notice, and often, they rise with you.

There is a saying, trust is built in the field — not just on paper. When you're in a contact scenario, on patrol, or managing a complex situation, you need to know the soldier next to you is switched on, trained well, and reliable.

Training is where that trust is formed. The more seriously you take your preparation, the more your section can trust you under stress.

It doesn't matter what your rank is, as leadership starts with a mindset. This truth echoes across all defence environments. In high-stakes moments, your performance won't magically lift, it will reflect your preparation.

What you do in the field, how you react under fatigue, and how you solve problems under pressure will always come back to how well you've trained.

10/27 RSAR carries a proud legacy and every soldier, from recruit to commander, is part of writing its future.

Making a Difference for Veterans

While Chris Tilley was serving his country overseas as a member of the Australian Defence Force (ADF), he lived by a simple motto: Look after the guy next to you.

When the former Lucindale farm boy found himself in places as far away as Timor-Leste and Afghanistan, he used this motto to cut through the politics and chaos – look after the guy next to you and have faith that he's looking out for you.

Now, as the Senior Advisor for Veterans Services at the Department for Correctional Services, Mr Tilley is still looking out for fellow veterans, and the work he does is making a tangible and lasting impact within the state's prisons.

"I joined the army in 2004 as an infantry soldier and was posted to my unit of choice, the 3rd Battalion, Royal Australian Regiment," Mr Tilley said.

"For those who aren't familiar with military terms, infantry is what most think of as the standard ground-pounding soldier, and the 3rd Battalion was Australia's paratrooper unit.

"Why did I join? Well, I had a disciplined upbringing, enjoyed the outdoors and was an Air Force Cadet for a number of years.

"I remember my mother would say to me, 'You know you can be anything you want', and that was really difficult for me. What 17-year-old kid is really passionate about being a plumber?

"I thought, there's no job I'm really passionate about, but I am disciplined and love the military, so let's do the responsible thing and join the Army."

It was a decision that would have a major impact on Mr Tilley's life, and as a 20-year-old he found himself on the ground in Timor-Leste, a country still finding its feet after a chaotic and violent separation from Indonesia a few years earlier.

"I have a distinct memory of being woken up in the dark hours one morning and my Section Commander goes, 'Chris, do you want to go to Timor?', and I was like, 'Yep. All right, let's go', he said.

"I got up, packed my stuff, and it was 'bang, let's rock and roll'. We had a very short time for training, equipment preparation and cultural familiarisation, and then we were in country. That was part of being in a Parachute Battalion, you might need to be anywhere in the world within 48 hours."

Making a Difference for Veterans

Mr Tilley arrived to a sky black with smoke from the civil unrest, and found himself working to stabilise the country in two separate deployments (2006 and 2007) by quelling riots and preventing the transportation of weapons to keep a fragile peace until things settled into assistance with democratic elections.

Timor-Leste, however, was relatively quiet in comparison to Mr Tilley's next deployment to Afghanistan in 2008.

"It's really tough to talk about Afghanistan because I think everyone's experience there was very different," he said.

"And that only gets tougher when you come home and drift apart from those you served with, so I can really only speak on behalf of myself.

"I spent a lot of time with the interpreters, the locals and the kids, trying to understand the culture, trying to understand why people want to kill us, and I think that was really helpful. You can go mad trying to understand the politics and justification of war, but at least you can understand the people involved.

"As challenging as trying to understand everything that was happening over there was, for me there was a peace in knowing that all I really had to worry about were three things: Where I put my foot on my next step, where I was going to jump when a shot rang out and looking after my mates.

"Everything else, all the mess, all the bulls..., it was secondary. A soldier can find peace in that."

After eight years in the ADF as a Private in the 3rd Battalion Royal, Australian Regiment and as a member of Australia's Federation Guard, where he was awarded a Soldier's Medallion for exemplary service, Mr Tilley transitioned into his civilian career as a Correctional Officer at Mobilong Prison near Murray Bridge.

It didn't take long for him to realise that some of the inmates he was now looking after also had military backgrounds.

He undertook research to understand the number of veterans in the South Australian prison population, and from this research he recognised a need for coordinated support for veteran prisoners, which led to the establishment of a Veteran's Support Group at Mobilong Prison.

This group commenced as a peer support group but evolved to provide a link to services for specific needs such as emergency housing, careers, legal support, family support, DVA claims and advocacy.

The successful program is now run throughout each of the state's prisons and in community for post-prison release onto community orders such as bail, parole or home detention.

Its primary focus is to give veteran prisoners the best opportunity to maintain the values associated with being a veteran, thereby assisting with their reintegration into the broader community.

The initiative provides rehabilitation opportunities for ex-military prisoners and their families, supports veteran staff, provides links to support services and encourages the readoption of the service identity, values and community.

Mr Tilley says there have been many success stories, including a veteran who was described as “one of the most dangerous prisoners we’ve ever had”, who had attempted to self-harm in prison, and now credits his survival to a Correctional Officer who went out of their way to check on his welfare and intervened.

“This veteran had undiagnosed issues from his service and very little support, and when he got out of prison, he became homeless,” he said.

“This was before Corrections formally established our program, so the Support Group, Open Arms and Andrew Russell Veteran Living all wrapped around him, and four years later he has become incredibly successful, owns several houses and is starting his own business.

Chris Tilley—Corrections Officer

“He actually came back into Corrections and was helping me train Correctional Officers.

“He credits his survival to the Correctional Officers who believed in him and gave him that little bit of extra attention and said, ‘Hey, are you okay?’”

With Remembrance Day approaching, Mr Tilley says it’s the perfect time for Australians to show solidarity with those who have served their country.

However, he says it’s not necessarily just a solemn affair.

“I catch up with one of my mates who I served with almost every year on Anzac Day,” Mr Tilley said.

“And I think that’s what it’s about, connection. Each person is different and everyone’s service was different, but we’re all still there for each other.

“For me, Remembrance Day is a time for solemn reflection, whereas Anzac Day is more of a celebration of togetherness and acknowledgement that we’re all on the same team.”

Editors Note: I had the pleasure of meeting Chris when I was President of the Murray Bridge RSL a few years ago. Chris was trying to start up a program within Corrections SA to support veterans who had “strayed” and become incarcerated. Through his tenacity, vigour and sheer hard work he has now become the head of such a program that is supported not only by Corrections SA but the Veteran Community as a whole. Well done Chris. We need more like you. David Laing

Chris Tilley - Veteran

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Once again member Chris Acton has sent in some more memories from his early days as a soldier. All stories welcome.

David,

I decided to search around to see if I had any photos from back in the late 50s to no avail. But I did come across something that I had written down some 60 years ago.

One time back in 1959/60 I spent a weekend providing a radio link between some ARA NCOs while one of the Infantry companies was on an exercise. It was a cushy job as all I had to do was set up and man the radio link between the Company CO and the ARA training staff.

Anyhow on the Saturday night these "old" soldiers were sitting around and they were reminiscing about some of their escapades. Being a low level CMF private they took no notice of me. Anyhow at one stage a couple of them sang a ditty which I just happened to write down. It went like this but to a tune.

Here are the words.

A soldier came home on 14 days leave when up stepped a Provo who said Pardon me Please?

There is blood on your shirt and guts on your sleeve so I think I will cancel your 14 days leave!

The soldier turned round with a murderous look and said "look here you bastard I'm back from Tobruk, where wizzbangs are flying and pleasures are few and brave men are dying for bastards like you!"

So women have babies and have them with ease, but Harlots have bastards and call them MPs. You can go and get stuffed and do as you please you pack of bastards you bloody MPs!!

I know its a bygone era and this was back some 60 years ago But it sort of shows us the difference between now and then. The "old" soldiers were WO2s and Sergeants and to my young eyes looked ancient and exactly what I thought an Aussie digger was.

In all my years in the CMF this particular night was etched in my memory and finding that scrap of paper bought it all back.

Chris.

A SERVICE PERSONS CALLING IS UNIQUE

I came across this article in my archived files when I was cleaning out some “dust gatherers!” It was submitted by our then President Alan Hook back in 2010, but still holds great relevance today, therefore the need to include it here.

The old saying “No one loves a soldier until the enemy is at the gate” still rings true in today’s current world situation, and who knows how long it will be before the general public are clamoring to support and honour our armed forces in a way not seen since World War 2. In an effort to better provide support to our current soldiers, I sent out hard copy letters to our major supermarket chains and local suppliers, asking for donations or just discounts on food items we provide for the Battalion. Not surprisingly, they all came back with a similar reply that “we provide support by way of donations to welfare organisations and local charities, and we wish your group all success, blah, blah, blinky blah!” Like I said, just wait till our soldiers are called upon to defend their supermarkets and warehouses, and they’ll be falling over themselves to provide support!

In 2010 Alan Hook wrote:

In recent years there has been a shift in assumptions and attitudes underpinning the way military service is viewed. Those in government who shape policy are increasingly attracted to the idea that the soldier is adequately provided for by the salary or allowances that compensate for his service both while it is being given and after it has ceased. Military service can be mistakenly seen as comparable to other forms of service that involve risk & danger, and therefore no longer viewed as unique. In volunteering for military service, the individual accepts the surrender of his basic rights under Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, (of which Australia is a signatory) and places his life/her, liberty and security of person in the hands of the State. Even when the State demands surrender of these rights by imposing a compulsion for service, the terms of the social contract imply that such a compulsion is done only within the democratic framework and is therefore with the assent of the individual, who at all times is a party to it. In no other calling, occupation or profession has the State the power to accept or demand the surrender of these rights. Military service in this fundamental respect is unique, and the obligation this places on the State is inescapable, as it is enduring. A SERVICE PERSON’S CALLING IS UNIQUE.

Nothing has changed, and for those who still provide this type of commitment, we thank you for your service! Editor

A Letter to the Editor from 2012

Hi Dave,

Just a few lines to let you know how much I enjoyed the comradeship after the march last Anzac Day. (2012)

I walked from the Cross of Sacrifice up to the Queens Head Hotel at North Adelaide, and I must say right now what a great little hotel it is, good friendly service, the place is nice and clean, food was great and well priced with no noisy poker machines banging away in the background. All up a darn good venue..

Next up I am presented with a sea of faces from our mob, now looking for a familiar face, stretching the memory back 52 years is a fairly mean feat, all these guys look a lot older. I soon came across Polly, I remembered him joining as a recruit in the Signals Platoon of 10 Battalion, a very funny fella was our Polly. Sad to see he has gone off his food though.

Sat down to lunch with three good blokes I had never met before, Alan Bates, Trevor Davey, and a third bloke, I can't remember his name though; I think he was ex 43 Battalion. Anyhow the conversation soon got around to mentioning names that one or two of once new or had heard of.

Dave Prideuex, where is he now? Heard he was up in Queensland, a great fellow was Dave. What about the Acton brothers? \(Chris is still with us. Editor\) Think they have moved to Eyre Peninsular, they were a couple of wild buggers when they had a few drinks. A few other names were thrown around "Where Are They Now?" Bob Way, Ron Pearson, Ian Inwood, plus more, Then again a couple of more names, no, they have passed on.

Then we started on camps, some good , some bad. And what about travel, all those exotic places we went to, Places like Alligator Gorge, Kuitpo Forrest, Humbug Scrub, Woodside, Murray Bridge, Pt. Parham and of course El Alamein and don't forget the great travel arrangements all in the back of a three ton truck, OH& S? what's that?

We discussed weapons, long gone silly things that happened, do you remember.....? And what about.....? It's a wonder somebody didn't get killed..... we would never get away with it today

About 1400 hrs most of our mob started to drift away, but Alan, Trevor and myself felt that we really should stay on for a while to keep the flag flying after all both the 10th and the 27th as well as the 43rd Battalions have a very strong record for flying the flag at times like this. Now it's a bit later and we three are the only ones left of our mob, but in the next room there still are some stragglers left from the 17th Construction Engineers, better hang on till they go, that pipe band that made all the noise when they came in have gone and now there is just the Adelaide All Male Choir average age 73 who are packing up after running out of songs I guess ,we then politely listened to the oldest member of the Choir 84 yrs old as he tries to tell us the history of their singing group 1500hrs its just Alan and me, Alan is now on the Red I'm still on beer , a couple for the road, time to leave, we have had a very good day, but more importantly we have done the right thing by the Association, duty bound we stood or ground and made sure we were the last to leave. Well somebody had to!

Cheers
