Bombing of Darwin 19th February 1942

We observe Bombing of Darwin Day on the anniversary of the day in 1942 when Darwin, in northern Australia, was first bombed by Japanese warplanes. The people of Darwin suffered terribly during this time and many civilians were evacuated. To this day, this action remains the largest and most devastating modern attack by a foreign power on mainland Australia. Bombing of Darwin Day is a time for us to recognise and remember the allied service personnel and civilians who suffered through that experience. Since the 1930s, Darwin had been a strategic trading port at the top end of Australia. During World War II, the Allies used Darwin as a military base and transit point for the defence of the Netherlands East Indies. With Australian and allied troops stationed there, Darwin's population had more than doubled by 1942.

At 9:58 am on 19 February 1942, 27 bombers accompanied by fighter escorts began the first Japanese air raid on the Australian mainland. Closely followed by aircraft, their goal was to destroy the Allies' military base in Darwin. From Darwin, the Allies could contest the Japanese invasion of nearby islands, Timor and Java.

Editorial

I mentioned last month that the RSARA Committee would be preparing and posting off Care Packages for our 21 soldiers deployed on TSE116 Border Protection duties. We met on January 31st at Keswick Barracks, and over a pizza or two packed in some goodies we think our deployed soldiers will appreciate. The parcels have now been forwarded to them via the Defence Postal System and we hope they enjoy the contents. The pics are on Page 4.

We also provided support for the Battalion at their Force Preservation Exercise at RAAF Base Edinburgh on Sunday 2nd February, by preparing and serving a mixed meat lunch with salads and fruit platter dessert. Around 130 hungry soldiers were fed, thanks to the help of our small group of fantastic Association volunteers. The full story is on Page 7.

We are joined this year by a new Commanding Officer LTCOL Darrin Tyson and a new RSM WO1 Mark Broadbent, both seasoned warriors. I have asked them for a little bit of information on themselves, and they have kindly responded with the contents on Page 14 & 15. Welcome gentlemen.

Once again I urge you to support our efforts by purchasing a ticket or two in our Fund Raiser Raffle, which is featured on Page 13. It's all for a good cause as it helps us to provide support for the Battalion by way of Trophies, Awards, updating of Honour Boards, Care Packages etc. and it's only $5 per ticket. Who can't afford $5? As Arnie would say.....

So, what makes this newsletter great are the stories we put together to keep you interested. But, nothing is more interesting than your own personal stories of your experiences as a soldier with our Regiment, so, to get the ball rolling, I'll start off with a story next month of my time with 10 RSAR back in the 70's. I was the CO's Sig, and have fond (and painful) memories of a time on Annual Camp in Cultana in 1974. You can add your stories too!

The Totally and Permanently Incapacitated Service Men and Women (INC) - SA Branch (TPI SA) has offered to support the RSARA with Welfare and Advocate Services. Their Advocate Services are located at 171 Richmond Rd Richmond. You do not have to be a member to access these services and they are supervised by our old Chief Clerk Scott (Jethro) Jeffrey. They also conduct hospital visits for any Ex-Service / Veteran and have welfare officers located at Port Augusta, Port Vincent, the Greater Adelaide Area, Murray Bridge and soon we will have one located in Mt Gambier. So if you need to chat with someone, give them a call on 08 83518140 between 0930 and 1230. Thanks for your support Scott.

That's it from me. Stay safe and keep your powder dry.

Cheers

Bombing of Darwin 19th February 1942

The first attack focused on the town centre and the harbour. Many buildings and ships were destroyed, including public buildings like the Darwin Post Office, the police barracks and the office of the Administrator of the Northern Territory.

Of the 47 ships in Darwin's harbour that day, 8 were sunk, one was beached and lost, and 11 were damaged. One bomb fell through the several decks of the hospital ship HMAS Manunda before exploding.

The ship disintegrated in a burst of flame which appeared to grow out and reach a height of 100 feet [30 m]. She finally pointed her nose to the sky and disappeared in a pall of black oily smoke, the gun on her fo'c's'le firing to the bitter end.

Between 19 February 1942 and 12 November 1943, the Japanese mounted 97 air attacks on towns and military bases across northern Australia. Broome was attacked on 3 March. More air raids were made on Wyndham, Port Hedland and Derby in Western Australia, Darwin and Katherine in the Northern Territory, Townsville and Mossman in Queensland, and Horn Island in the Torres Strait.

On 31 May 1942, the war came to the east coast of Australia, when 3 Japanese midget submarines entered Sydney Harbour. In June 1942, a submarine lightly shelled coastal suburbs of Sydney and Newcastle.

Japanese submarines also attacked coastal ships, causing the loss of around 29,000 tons of shipping.

More than 250 people, both allied service personnel and civilians, died in Darwin on 19 February 1942.

Care Packages for our Deployed Soldiers

The 21 Care Packages, prepared by the Committee for the soldiers deployed on TSE 116 Border Protection duties, included:

- Le´ Snacks Cheese & Crackers
- Sultanas
- Pop Corn
- Jelly Jubes
- Coffee sticks
- Mentos Mints
- Cashews
- Various Choc Bars
- Potato Chips
- Pack of Playing Cards

A "Thank You For Your Service" note and an RSAR decal were also included. We hope they enjoy their gifts from us.

The Care Packages were packed and the committee then enjoyed a Pizza lunch provided by the RSAR Association, after which the first Committee meeting for the year was conducted.

Farewell to the CO.

David Laing bids farewell to departing Commanding Officer LTCOL Aaron Jackson, who will soon leave for a new teaching role at the Swedish Defence University in Stockholm, Sweden. During his tenure LTCOL Jackson was instrumental in gaining support for the RSAR Association, granting us access to Exercise Southern Tiger and providing the names and mailing addresses for the deployed troops on TSE 116. We wish Aaron all the best in his future ventures and look forward to hearing from him in the future.

Padres' Ponderings

Morale is the cornerstone of success in the Australian Army, and 10/27 Battalion is no exception. It fuels our ability to operate effectively, overcome challenges, and maintains the mateship that unites us all. Whether in training, deployment, or daily operations, high morale is crucial to achieving mission success and ensuring overall well-being.

At its core, morale is built on a shared sense of purpose and confidence in our abilities, leadership, and each other. It gives us the strength to push forward through adversity and the resilience to face uncertainty with determination. In high-pressure environments—whether in the field, on deployment, or in support roles—strong morale keeps us focused and mission-ready.

Effective leadership is key to maintaining high morale. Leaders who inspire by example, act with integrity, and foster a culture of respect and support can make a significant impact. When soldiers feel valued, heard, and supported, their motivation and dedication increase. Trust in leadership encourages engagement, commitment, and a willingness to give their best in all situations.

Morale thrives on teamwork and mutual support. The friendships and trust forged through shared experiences create a deep sense of unity. Open communication and looking out for one another build strong bonds, ensuring no soldier feels alone. When we stand together, we are stronger and more resilient.

A high level of morale equips soldiers with the mental toughness needed to endure adversity. Whether facing the rigors of training or the emotional toll of deployments, a strong sense of connection and purpose makes all the difference. Soldiers with high morale are better able to handle stress, adapt to change, and stay focused even in the most demanding situations.

Morale isn't just about work; it's also about maintaining physical fitness, mental well-being, and a healthy work-life balance. The Australian Army offers resources to support soldiers, but it's our responsibility to check in with our mates, provide support, and ensure no one is left behind.

In 10/27 Battalion, morale should be more than just a concept—it should define how we operate. Supporting each other, persevering through challenges, and celebrating victories, big or small, are all part of a thriving culture. Whether in the field, in the barracks, or at home, morale keeps us united and strong.

As we step into 2025, let's commit to fostering a positive environment and ask ourselves; How can you contribute to boosting morale within 10/27? What steps can you take to support a mate who might be struggling? What are we called to do?

Remembering, morale is everyone's responsibility.

Remembering, morale is everyone's responsibility.

Feeding the Troops 2025

A small but dedicated group of RSAR Association members provided support for around 130 soldiers at the February 2025 Force Preservation Exercise at RAAF Base Edinburgh, led by our ever vigilant WO Carter Col Abel.

In temperatures hovering around 40° the soldiers were treated to a lunch of selected cold meats, various pastas and green salads, and a fruit platter dessert, plus soft drinks.

We decided to charge the soldiers $5 for their meal, and this included a cold can of soft drink or a bottle of water.

My thanks go to Col Abel, Graham and Julie Elliott, Heather Phillips, Howard Parslow, Selina Laing, Corey Skapin and Des Hawkins, plus the 10/27 Bn soldiers who helped us on the day.

Thanks also to RSM WO1 Mark Broadbent for his cooperation and support in the planning before and during this exercise, and to LTCOL Darrin Tyson for allowing it all to happen.

We had a camera ready to take photos, but the 8 volunteers were so flat out during the exercise that no one, including the editor thought about picking it up and taking a few pics. My apologies for the oversight.

Thankfully Adjutant Captain Charles Jilbert suggested we set up our “Mess Line” inside the hallway of the Monash Centre, and the air conditioning inside made our efforts more bearable.

For your information, we fed 130 soldiers in 1 hour, with sliced ham, chicken, sliced beef, fritz, green salads, rice combo, coleslaw, potato salad, pasta salad, beetroot, olives, buttered bread and rolls, followed by Watermelon and Honey Dew Rockmelon slices.

The food was prepared by Chief Bait Layer Abel and his team of helpers at the Linden Park Royal Australian Regiment RSL over two days and transported to Edinburgh in eskies and ice boxes. The food was served within 10 minutes of its arrival, and what little leftovers that remained were later taken to the Kensington RSL and provided free of charge to some of the Old & Bold. A great exercise.

This pic was taken at a similar exercise conducted in 2024

MONOPOLY and its clever place in WW2

Starting in 1941, an increasing number of British Airmen found themselves as the involuntary guests of the Third Reich, and the Crown was casting about for ways and means to facilitate their escape... Now obviously, one of the most helpful aids to that end is a useful and accurate map, one showing not only where stuff was, but also showing the locations of 'safe houses' where a POW on-the-lam could go for food and shelter.

Paper maps had some real drawbacks -- they make a lot of noise when you open and fold them, they wear out rapidly, and if they get wet, they turn into mush. Someone in MI-5 (similar to America's OSS) got the idea of printing escape maps on silk. It's durable, can be scrunched-up into tiny wads and unfolded as many times as needed, and makes no noise whatsoever.

At that time, there was only one manufacturer in Great Britain that had perfected the technology of printing on silk, and that was John Waddington, Ltd. When approached by the government, the firm was only too happy to do its bit for the war effort.

By pure coincidence, Waddington was also the U.K. Licensee for the popular American board game, Monopoly. As it happened, 'games and pastimes' was a category of item qualified for insertion into 'CARE packages', dispatched by the International Red Cross to prisoners of war.

Under the strictest of secrecy, in a securely guarded and inaccessible old workshop on the grounds of Waddington's, a group of sworn-to-secrecy employees began mass-producing escape maps, keyed to each region of Germany or Italy where Allied POW camps were regional system. When processed, these maps could be folded into such tiny dots that they would actually fit inside a Monopoly playing piece.

As long as they were at it, the clever workmen at Waddington's also managed to add:

1. A playing token, containing a small magnetic compass
2. A two-part metal file that could easily be screwed together
3. Useful amounts of genuine high-denomination German, Italian, and French currency, hidden within the piles of Monopoly money!

British and American air crews were advised, before taking off on their first mission, how to identify a 'rigged' Monopoly set -- by means of a tiny red dot, one cleverly rigged to look like an ordinary printing glitch, located in the corner of the Free Parking square. Of the estimated 35,000 Allied POWs who successfully escaped, an estimated one-third were aided in their flight by the rigged Monopoly sets. Everyone who did so was sworn to secrecy indefinitely, since the British Government might want to use this highly successful ruse in still another, future war.

The story wasn't declassified until 2007, when the surviving craftsmen from Waddington's, as well as the firm itself, were finally honoured in a public ceremony. It's always nice when you can play that 'Get out of Jail' Free' card! I realize some of you are (probably) too young to have any personal connection to WWII (Sept. '39 to Aug. '45), but this is still very interesting. Your move!

National Day for War Animals

Each year, on 24 February, is National Day for War Animals in Australia, where we commemorate the deeds and sacrifices of animals in war.

Animals have been put to many uses in war, serving as transport, beasts of burden, messengers, protectors, mascots, and pets. They have played an important part in all wars in which Australians have been involved.

Famously, of 136,000 Australian horses sent to the First World War, only one returned. After General Bridges died in May 1915 from a wound sustained at Gallipoli, his favourite horse, Sandy, returned to Australia, eventually finding a home at the Australian War Memorial.

While the donkey made famous by Simpson is perhaps the best known example of a beast of burden, mules were in constant demand to carry supplies to the frontline.

The Camel Corps was formed in the early years of the First World War. By late 1917 the Desert Mounted Corps had some 6,000 camels.

The homing ability and navigational skills of carrier pigeons saw them used during the First and Second World Wars. Some were even awarded medals for gallantry.

Working dogs were used by the Royal Australian Engineers in 1918, with sappers handling messenger dogs in the trenches of France. Search dogs were used from 1944 after the raising of the First Australian Dog Platoon. Mine detection and scout dogs were used in Korea and Vietnam and Explosive Detection Dogs were used to counter the threat of improvised explosive devices in Afghanistan.

During the First World War many Australians brought animals from home to the training camps in Egypt. When the war ended they were donated to the Cairo Zoo. As late as the 1950s, it was said to have had the largest collection of Australian native animals outside of Australia. Since then a selection of dogs, cats, goats, possums, rams, eagles, monkeys, turtles, and many more have acted as formal (or informal) mascots for Australian units.

This week the Research Centre received a call from a fan of Sandy, Major General Sir William Throsby Bridges' favourite charger. November this year sees the 90th anniversary of Sandy's return to Australia, after a tour of duty which included the coast of Gallipoli, Egypt and France. Sandy's fan wished to confirm the information the Research Centre has about this much-loved animal in preparation for a ceremony to mark the anniversary.

Although General Bridges had the use of three horses, Sandy was believed to be his favourite. This impressive portrait (previous page) in the Memorial's photographs collection clearly acknowledges the General's feelings, as he allows his charger's head to obscure his own!

General Bridges died in May 1915 from a wound sustained at Gallipoli and Sandy, who was presumed to be offshore at the time, was eventually shipped back to Egypt. Nearly a year later he was transported to France.

In October 1917, the Minister for Defence, Senator George Pearce, called for Sandy to be returned to

Australian Army Tracker Dogs South Vietnam 1967

Australia. Copies of the ensuing letters, cables, minutes and memos between the organising parties comprise an official record held in the Memorial archives. This record AWM13 7026/2/31 can be viewed in the Memorial's Research Centre Reading Room.

Sandy sailed from Liverpool in September 1918, arriving in Melbourne in November. As the official record says, he was "pensioned off", or turned out to graze at the Central Remount Depot in Maribyrnong. Blind and unwell, Sandy was put down in 1923.

Sandy's claim to fame is not just as the favourite horse of General Bridges, but that, of 136,000 Australian horses sent away to the First World War, Sandy was the sole horse brought back.

They also served.
